Rosewood Private Investments Announces the Acquisition of MultiCam

Dallas, Texas, May 20, 2014 - Rosewood Private Investments ("RPI") is proud to announce the recent acquisition of MultiCam Holding Company, Inc. ("MultiCam"), a Dallas, Texas based manufacturer of CNC machine cutting solutions. RPI partnered with industry executive David Morse to pursue investments in the manufacturing technologies space, and MultiCam represents RPI's first platform company under this initiative. RPI expects to build upon the success and organic growth of MultiCam by pursuing add-on acquisitions of complementary businesses.

Derry Burns, a Director at RPI, stated, "The MultiCam team has developed a broad portfolio of CNC machine cutting solutions and leveraged its network of international technology centers over the years to become an industry leader with a reputation for high-quality service and product performance. We are excited to partner with MultiCam and support its growth strategy."

Kris Hanchette, MultiCam's President & CEO, commented, "Rosewood is the right partner to help grow MultiCam to the next level. They have a long-term vision, provide a conservative capital structure and are willing to invest the resources that are needed to grow a manufacturing company. Rosewood's operating partner strategy and experience investing in manufacturing companies gives MultiCam access to tools that are critical for sustainable growth. It was important for me to find a partner for MultiCam who shares our values, supports U.S. manufacturing and has a talented team that will help us grow well into the future."

Based in Dallas, Texas, MultiCam, Inc. is a leading provider of mechanized cutting machine tools. MultiCam produces a full line of cutting solutions including routers, plasma, laser, water jet and knife cutting machines. MultiCam sells through a global network of independently-owned distributors to a diverse set of end users. For more information about MultiCam, visit www.multicam.com.
